The new wireless library will be put aside for now. However, I will put some time into it when I can trying to debug it enough to get basic functionality working so we can use it. According to David, it is already more reliable than the current library, but I want to get it to a known level of stability and functionality, and test it with other parts of the library before releasing it to the wild. So for now it is not a primary issue. Sorry everyone.
